CUTEK was created 30 years ago with Cedar in mind. This stunning and durable wood species is widely used in New Zealand, but has its challenges in full weather exposure. Cedar can split, check and cup and its natural beauty can be obscured by mould and fungi.

New Zealand has one of the harshest climates in the world with extreme UV, high rainfall, hot sun, and snow. CUTEK has been a top performer in this environment. It is easily applied to all cedar whether rough or smooth, and penetrates deep into the wood. CUTEK remains active inside the wood, repelling water even after the surface has weathered and silvered.

CUTEK coated wood has been effective against rot, decay and termites throughout this 30 year history in New Zealand and has proven to greatly increase the service life of wood.
